Q. No.1 Make a précis of the following passage. Also assign a suitable title to it.

Marks: 20

Old age, it is said, disqualifies us from taking an active part in the great scenes of business. But in what scenes? Let me ask. If in those which require the strength and vivacity of youth, I readily admit the charge; but are there no other—none which are particularly appropriated to the evening of life, and which being executed by the powers of the mind and perfectly consistent with a less vigorous state of body? Nothing can be more void of foundation than to assert that old age necessarily disqualifies a man for the great affairs of the world. As well might it be affirmed that the pilot is totally useless and unengaged in the business of the ship, because, while the rest of the crew are more actively employed in their respective departments, he sits quietly at the helm and directs its motion. If in the great scenes of business an old man cannot perform a part which requires the force and energy of vigorous years, he can act none the less in a nobler and more important character. It is not by exertions of corporeal strength and activity that the momentous affairs of the state are conducted; it is by cool deliberation, by prudent counsel and by that authoritative influence whichever attends on public esteem—qualifications which are so far from being impaired that they are usually strengthened and improved by increase of years.

Q. No.2 Read the following passage carefully and answer in your words the questions that follow:

Marks: 20

Man's growth from barbarism to civilization supposed to be the theme of history. But sometimes, looking at great stretches of history, it is difficult to believe that this ideal has made much progress or that we are very much civilized or advanced. There is enough of want of co-operation today, of one country or people selfishly attacking or oppressing another, of one man exploiting another.

It is well to remember that in many ways, man has not made very great progress from the other animals. It may be that in certain ways some animals are superior to him still. We look down upon the insects as almost the lowest of living things. And yet the tiny bees and ants have learnt the lesson of co-operation and of sacrifice for the common good far better than man. If mutual co-operation and sacrifice or the good society are the test of civilization, we may say that the bees and ants are in this respect superior to man.

In one of our old Sanskrit books, there is a verse which can be translated as follows;” For the family, sacrifice the individual, for the community, the family, for the country, the community, and for the Soul, the whole world.” What the Soul is, few of us can know or tell, and each one of us can interpret it in a different way. But the lesson this Sanskrit verse teaches us is the same lesson of co-operation and sacrifice for the larger good. We, in India had forgotten the sovereign path to real greatness for many a day so we had fallen. But again we seem to have glimpses of it, and all the country is astir. How wonderful it is to see men and women and boys and girls, smilingly going ahead in India’s cause and not caring about any pain or suffering! Well may they smile and be glad, for the joy of serving in a great cause is theirs; and to those who are fortunate, comes the joy of sacrifice also.

1. Point out the theme of the passage in one sentence.
2. In what manner bees and ants are superior to man?
3. What is the lesson of the Sanskrit Verse for mankind?
4. What is the motivation for men, women, boys and girls in India today that keeps them glad and smiling?
